FIRE

The depth of the doorway accounted for an addition to the main structure toward the south. On the south side of the doorframe was a second door with a left hand hinge. This door was found in the open position. The door revealed an even layer major smoke demarcation that extended from the top of the door down toward approximately two feet above the floor and moderate smoke damage continuing to floor level.

Entry to unit #3A was made via the rear deck on the second floor on the south side of the structure. The left hand hinged door was removed by firefighters during rescue efforts. Observation of the interior of this room revealed heavy contents of personal belongings. This room showed the greatest amount of fire damage in the structure.

Examination of this unit showed smoke damage and no flame damage in the bedroom, and bathroom while moving in a clockwise direction inside the apartment. Smoke damage increased in the living room and heat and fire damage was visible in this room closest to the east wall.

A "V"-shaped fire pattern was visible on the east wall of the living room that started at the baseboard and extended to the ceiling level. The remaining portions of the pattern were clean burned where firefighters hadn't removed the lath and plaster during firefighting operations. A couch was in the center of the living room and was positioned facing toward the south and running east to west with its east side up against the east wall. Mass loss to the couch increased moving from the west end of the couch which suffered only smoke damage as compared to the east end which suffered heavy fire attack to its structural wooden members. At the east end of the couch there was increased mass loss to the front leading face of the couch.

Excavation of the area of greatest damage on the east end of the couch in the area at the bottom of the "V"-shaped pattern revealed a computer tower that fell from a cabinet located directly to the south. Examination of the computer tower showed no minor heat damage to the interior of the unit that was exposed. Also found in the area of origin were cigarette butts and a two burner Intertek electric stove, model # 3068964. In that was positioned on the floor in the area of the couch with the greatest mass loss. Inspection of the electric stove showed that it was plugged into an extension cord that was plugged into a strip outlet that was plugged into a wall duplex outlet on the south side of the room to the east of the back door. Examination of the electrical cords, plugs and outlets did not reveal any signs of fire origination. A large pot of rice and beans was found on the electric stove and the burner and controls on the side where the large pot of food was sitting was fire damaged and the other side of the electric stove was undamaged. Examination of the flooring where the electric stove was sitting showed that the wooden flooring suffered fire damage underneath the electric stove on the side where the large pot of food was positioned. An internet search about the electric stove did not reveal any recalls or fires related to this model of stove.

Observation of the large pot of food showed circular patterns to the bottom side of the pot that was exposed to heat from the coil heating element. The interior of the pot revealed only small amounts of burning to the very bottom layer of food on the interior surface of the pot.

An examination of the attic space revealed heavy fire damage that extended upward along the east wall of unit #3A and into the attic. The attic suffered major smoke and fire damage on the south side of the attic and moderate smoke and fire damage toward the north end. Firefighters cut several ventilation holes into the roof of the structure during fire suppression activities.

Interior Exam

Study of the north elevation reveals soot staining to the gable end vent and melting and fire damage to the vinyl siding and smoke damage to the soffit above the gable vent. The front storm door and interior door were in the open position.

The study of the east elevation showed smoke staining to the gable vents at the peak of the roof and soffit above. The electric meters, meter box and raceway were located on this side of the structure and showed no signs of damage. The single gas meter was found in the "off" position and locked off by the utility company. The gas meter showed no signs of smoke or fire damage. Both utility meters have been eliminated as a causation of the fire.

The ground on the exterior of the south side of the structure contained a large amount of burned fire debris that firefighters removed from the attic above unit #3. Examination of the second floor exterior, that is accessed via a rear staircase to a deck, revealed that the back door to the upstairs unit #3 was found on the deck. The door showed heavy fire damage to its upper half of the interior face and observation of the deadbolt and doorknob lock shows that only the doorknob lock was engaged during the fire. Firefighters report having to pull the door outward during forcible entry to gain access to the interior of unit #3A.

Firefighters completely removed the back door on the south side of the structure during firefighting operations. A large hole was cut into the structure above the back door. This hole extended from above the back door to the peak of the roof during overhaul procedures. Observation of a window located to the east of the back door showed smoke and heat damage above the window.

The west elevation study revealed smoke damage from a roof gable vent that extended into the soffit at the peak of the roof. Two holes were opened in the roof during fire suppression operations and showed no smoke or fire damage around the openings. A railing to a second floor balcony was sawed open during fire suppression activities and did not show signs of smoke or fire damage.

Study of the interior of the structure started via a door labeled "B" to the basement level which was located on the west side of the structure. This door showed signs of forced entry. It was later learned that firefighters forced this door open during fire suppression activities. The staircase ran from south to north along the west wall of the foundation. There were no signs of smoke or fire in the basement.

Examination of the water heater, furnace and electrical panel did not show signs of smoke or fire damage. The gas forced air furnace was missing its front cover.

Inspection of the electric panels revealed that panel #3 belonged to the fire damaged apartment on the second floor. The main circuit breaker was turned off by firefighters during suppression activities. One circuit breaker was found in the tripped position in this panel. The #21 breaker was tripped and not identified on the index panel on the door.

Investigation of unit #4 on the first floor, at the midpoint of the structure showed no signs of smoke or fire damage. The door on the east side entrance was damaged by forced entry. It was learned that firefighters forced this door open while performing search and rescue activities. There was water damage visible in this unit coming from the ceiling above and several broken ceiling tiles were located on the floor.

Study of unit #2, located on the south side of the first floor, showed signs of forced entry through the north door to the unit. There were no signs of smoke or fire damage.

Observation of the front foyer on the first floor, just inside the front door showed no signs of smoke or fire damage. Inspection of the front door revealed no signs of forced entry.

Entry into unit #1 led to a two story unit that was located in the northwest corner of the structure. Observation of the door showed no signs of fire damage and minor to moderate smoke damage visible on the walls.

Moving to the second floor via a staircase that runs from north to south along the east side of the structure shows no signs of smoke or fire damage. At the top of the stairs was the door to unit #3. The door was in the open position and showed no signs of forced entry.

Examination of the unit interior revealed minor smoke damage throughout with the exception of the south wall in the living room around a doorframe. Around the living room doorway to the south, there was heavy smoke damage on the majority of the doorframe from approximately the baseboard level continuing to the top of the doorframe. This smoke damage pushed past an item covering the door frame as opposed to flowing into the room as an unrestricted buoyant gas. A veneer piece of wood was found screwed to the top of the doorframe. This piece of wood matched a door that is found on the floor of the unit in the Livingroom. Inspection of the door laying on the floor in the Livingroom is the same color of wood and firefighters report that this door covered the open doorframe along the south wall of the unit that they removed. There are several approximately three inch screws attached to the door that match holes in the doorframe with the smoke damage. Continuing toward the south, the doorframe was approximately one foot deep.
