SYNOPSIS:	The Fire Department was called to a report of a dwelling fire. Firefighters arrived to find an exterior fire on the dwelling and quickly extinguished it. The occupant admits using a bucket for disposing of cigarette butts on the deck in the area of origin. Contruction workers notified the occupants of the fire and stated that the fire was only around the base of the bucket when they first saw flames. The ignition source was a cigarette butt. The first fuel ignited was wood decking. The action that brought these items together was due to a cigarette butt not making it into the bucket and landing on the wood decking. The classification of fire cause is accidental.
