

New employee orientation dates set for 2023

The city is excited to welcome City of Saint Paul’s newest employees at the Welcome to Saint Paul orientation. Their success and confidence in their new role is important to the City of Saint Paul both in how we operate and serve our community. Therefore the city is requiring the attendance of this virtual event for all new employees, including temporary employees, to help them understand Saint Paul’s mission, vision and values. Please seek supervisor approval prior to registering for the orientation.

Flashback Friday

Staff have been scanning old photos of the plant and utility for a book on the plant to be done in conjunction with the new plant project. This is the treatment plant with the railroad entrance for chemical transports. Note the chimney that says “water works” in this undated photo.

Please remember to be respectful of our neighbors when leaving your shift at the end of the day and keep engine revving down.

New employees join the utility

Brandon Dorsey

Robin Duke

Kate Husom

Sarah Leisenheimer

Elli Nordhaus

Carissa Roell

The water utility has hired several new interns as well as a seasonal water utility worker who all started work on May 22,

Brandon Dorsey is an intern working in project engineering. Robin Duke is the water utility worker. Kate Husom is an intern working in human resources. Sarah Leisenheimer and Carissa Roell are interns working in the damage prevention unit. Elli Nordhaus is an intern working in marketing and public relations.

Please welcome them to the water utility!

No water, no cheers!

Staff met at Blackstack Brewing after work on Wednesday, May 24 for a no water, no cheers happy hour celebrating one of the many ways we use water.
