Who expects to have a window explode in a shower of glass through the bedroom over the bed even onto the pillow I'm sleeping on, in Minnesota Winter, New Year's Eve, 1/1/24.

Police arrived, found the brick, tried to assure you it was a random act of drunkenness youth revelers on this particular New Year's Eve, but you wonder to what purpose, what meanness, what cause and effect? Talk about vulnerable and not safe, the Intent to damage and destroy palpable, real, evident.

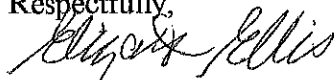

And then there's the aftermath, the repair stage and its cost, $1,040 materials and labor.

The Police offered to have the space, a hole, the size of a basketball, boarded up. I took them up on their offer not knowing whom I could call at Midnight. There must be a reparation, restitution fund, but no. I receive a bill nearing and almost $500 from the City of St Paul.

When the Policeman found the brick next to my bed, glass shards on my pillow. I cried. On leaving the Policeman said, "Happy New Year." I burst into tears. Again.

I appeal to your forbearance, restraint and tolerance to reduce your costs from this criminal damage to my property. The perpetrator has not stepped up to the plate.

Respectfully,

Elizabeth Ellis
