P.S. it wasn't like the bar had all these drinks on the bar counter, everything was cleared but that One bottle. Which I guess that one bottle can cause the violation, just hoping that you will see that it was just that one bottle right at 2:30...

Ok, just wanted to give you my Pitch on that. Thank you.

Hello,
Well.....I went to work today and found out that we may have received a violation last night. I'm sure we did, I called the east district and they gave me some info.

Apparently one of the employees who was not working (because we had our holiday party) opened a beer before 2am. Our employee holiday party ended promptly at midnight. He was finishing up the beer around 2:28/2:30am while helping the clean up when the police arrived. He did not deny having the beer, and it was NOT poured or opened after 2am, it was just right on the nose at 2:30am when the beer he was drinking was gone. When they knocked on the door he realized the time & dumped the beer and let the police in. I would like to discuss this violation. We have been in compliance and have not been violating this regulation. We know the policy and I can assure you that we are not pouring after 2am or consuming after 2:30am. I would be happy to give you the surveillance footage to verify this. Please let me know how I should proceed. Although this may be a violation, it was just a matter of seconds or few minutes before it was corrected. I hope this can be resolved without being penalized.

Please let me know your thoughts,

Warmly,
Nicole
