Truck Parking Conclusions

- Current parking enforcement resources are limited.
- Fines do not appear to be a deterrent. No structured/increasing fine system in place.
- Challenges surrounding towing - cost, capacity, storage, and disposal.
- Limited opportunity to address trucking parking issues with signed parking restrictions.
- Code is not easy to interpret, and it is unlikely that truck drivers and residents fully understand the truck parking requirements.
- Unclear if existing code is consistent with City policy direction.

Separate (but related) Issues

- Parking enforcement resources are limited
- Limited options for truck parking on a regional basis
- Equity
 - A number of truck owners and drivers are from immigrant communities and are POC
 - Truck parking tends to impact lower income neighborhoods more than higher income neighborhoods

Rankin/Stewart Area

Potential Reasons for Increase in Truck Parking/Complaints

- More trucks in service for the shipping/freight industry (+24%)
- Lack of available parking at private businesses (or price of parking)
- Increase in waiting times to unload product upon arrival
- Drivers may be reaching/have reached limit on hours able to drive and must park and rest for specific amount of time (federally regulated)
 - Trucks passing through to other destinations reaching limit
 - Trucks with local deliveries reaching limit
- Owner/Operator lives in or near city and needs place to park his/her truck when not working

All have different needs and responses.
