Organization History

Saint Paul Police Department operates as a division of the City of Saint Paul, a unit of local government. Saint Paul serves as a business and cultural hub for the east metro of the Twin Cities. As such, SPPD serves as a regional leader in law enforcement, and is the second largest law enforcement agency in Minnesota. The agency has 800 total employees, three patrol districts and several specialized units and tasks forces that serve as investigative and tactical resources for the entire metropolitan area. SPPD officers respond to nearly 300,000 calls for service and investigate about 13,000 Part I crimes each year.

Organization Goals The agency has laid out three primary goals that direct priority for agency activities:

* Increasing Diversity

* Increasing Community Engagement

* Addressing Gang and Gun Violence

Organization Changes

A new Chief of Police was appointed in the summer of 2016, Chief Todd Axzell. The Chief is committed to delivering trusted service with respect—every day, without exception. With the new appointment, the Chief has advanced several initiatives including the forming of a dedicated Community Engagement Unit, and ensuring the entire agency undergoes implicit bias training.

* Project/Program Title Capital City Bike Cops for Kids and Training

* Project/Program Description Saint Paul Police Department (SPPD) requests funding for two project: Bike Cops for Kids, and to provide training resources for our three technicians preparing video evidence. A brief summary of each project follows:

1. SPFD is creating a video evidence team, which at full capacity will include five technicians. The unit will manage the filing of video footage through body worn cameras. They will also help prepare digital evidence acquired from outside sources for use in building cases and supporting investigations. Examples include retail, hotel, or gas station security camera footage reviewed for homicide, burglary, or other types of crimes. SPFD is seeking funding for training for the new hires for the unit. They will attend a digital evidence recovery training in 2018.

2. Capital City Bike Cops for Kids is expanding on a successful model program in Minneapolis. SPFD patrol officers will bike through neighborhood streets stopping young cyclist to provide helmets and safety gear. The aim is to make city streets safer for our youth - one connection at a time.

Traffic safety education will be used as an avenue to foster positive police interactions. Officers will stop youth to offer basic instruction on obeying the rules of the road, proper bike maintenance, and to suggest safe bike routes. The program will begin in the Western district, and expand to other neighborhoods with available resources.

Saint Paul police officers will be on the hunt to identify and recognize our safest cyclist. Youth proudly sporting SPFD badges, and demonstrating safe behavior, will be entered into a raffle to win a new bike. Through resources from the Target Corporation, up to 30 youth a year will receive the opportunity to win.

Safe streets start with all of us!
