Staff Report on the Barr Engineering study concerning Lilydale Regional Park.

Mike Hahm, Parks and Recreation Director, presented and summarized the recently completed Barr report and resulting recommendations for next steps at the brickyard area in Lilydale Regional Park. He said the report would be available online immediately following the meeting, and had been fully vetted between department staff, the Office of the City Attorney, and Risk Management Officers. He described the scope of the study, and identified the areas defined in the report as low, medium and high risk. He said key immediate next steps included: 1) restricting high risk areas, with barriers and signage at access points; removal and potential relocation of Vento Overlook; continuing to restrict access to three of the four existing fossil areas 2) reopening of areas of the brickyard determined to be safe, including some trail stabilization and signage 3) restoring access to fossil permitting for fossil area 1, beginning next fall, including relocation of benches and updating of signage. He said additional management actions would include routine inspections, signage added throughout the area to inform users of hazards, and signage to be used as part of a first responders grid system. He introduced St. Paul Fire Chief Tim Butler to talk about the grid system and signage.

Chief Butler described the grid system and signage which he said would allow first responders to quickly find park visitors who needed assistance.

Councilmember Thune asked whether there could be something simpler than an eight digit number, which could be difficult to remember in a stressful situation. Chief Butler said one outcome was that emergency responders now had a better understanding and familiarity with landmarks in the park and could use that information along with the grid system to locate park users.

Councilmember Stark asked whether there was a standard for spacing of signage. Chief Butler said emergency responders could accommodate as many signs as the Parks Department planned to place. Mr. Hahm said they were currently working to finalize materials for the barriers and on the number and locations of signs. He said some locations are already set, and they would work with their partners in public safety and other departments to make sure the locations were vetted. He said they also needed to get in and do regradings and basic maintenance that had not been done while the park was closed. He said they would remove Vento Overlook and relocate it if possible, and, finally, re-open potentially as soon as summer. He said they appreciated the willingness of the Council to communicate the plans and to monitor support.

Councilmember Bostrom asked whether the signs would just be in Lilydale park or elsewhere in the City. Mr. Hahm said what was described was specific to Lilydale Park. Councilmember Bostrom said the signs acknowledged that there were still potential hazards, and he questioned re-opening park. He said he hadn't heard from anyone who was anxious to get back, and this had cost the City money. Mr. Hahm said following the tragedies the City took deliberate action to close and study the park, and current information from the Barr report was consistent with the study done immediately following the accident. He said based on that information, they were indefinitely those areas the report suggested should be closed and taking action to adequately warn and safely open the other areas.

Councilmember Thune noted that there had been interest in when the park was opening back up.

Councilmember Thao asked whether the signage would be in languages other than

English and where information would be available to those without internet access. Mr. Hahm said the signage used international symbols, and they were assessing what could be done with multiple languages on-site as well as on the website and on school permits. He said they had been working with district councils and the National Park Service and other stakeholders and programming partners throughout the process and would make sure they were fully up to speed as park users and community educators.

Councilmember Stark said high, medium, and low were relative risk assessments, and he asked whether the low risk areas being opened were comparable in risk to other City park areas. Mr. Hahm said essentially they were, although no area of the park was completely without risk. He said the assessment had to do with evaluation of the soil and underlying geological conditions for further earth movement.
