Hi Dave,

interesting! what a joke!

You turned a nice clean unit into a shit hole. You make a mess with the stovetop and ask me to clean it up - and you are talking characters with me - this is really not the things for you to talk about.

The roommate agreement states clearly that who make a mess in the public area, who clean it up and resume it to the original state.

I'll take care and fix all the other items. If you do not clean up the mess you created at the stovetop, the city do not pass the inspection and issue vacant order, then you are responsible for the vacant order and should take the consequences of the vacant order.

Sincerely,

Lee

This is MY 24 hour notice to you that 9am tomorrow WILL NOT wibe ok for a contractor to arrive. I have appointments that cannot be canceled or rescheduled. I apologize for the inconvenience but I can be available by 10 am or later. THIS IS NON NEGOTIABLE also, as a note: the roommate agreement we signed says cleaning duties will be split between the residents. Since you claim to be a resident and have not cleaned once since you moved in, I encourage you to do your part and clean the stove. I have the light globe and can install it before the next inspection, but i feel with the current state of living and how you have failed as a landlord to maintain the house as the city requires, i feel like cleaning the stove would be a good character building experience for you

The city clerks office is coming later this week to do another inspection. I've been told you may be forced to give me the upstairs residence as the basement has current fire safety issues and the entire house was only supposed to be a single family unit but yet you had 2 "families" living here until october

I just had my meeting with the city office and I would highly encourage you to contact me right away as there seem to be several large issues that you need to resolve immediately. It appears as though you may have broken several laws Mr lee

Yes Mr. Lee, I got the detailed list of all the repairs and adjustments that need to be done as well by the first. I understand the need for urgency and can adjust slightly, but please do not try to tell me that working off of my computer is a breach of contract when you and I both know it's not.

Ok,

It not that I deliberately trying to make it inconvenient for you. The contractors are very difficult to get hold of. As. You know, I waited the whole day yesterday for the drywall guys and they didn't show up. It's not what time I want them to show up - have to follow their schedule and the city have a tight deadline to get the job done.

Good morning Dave,

As per the instructions from the city officer, I've lined up two contractors to look at the windows in the basement and need to access your unit tomorrow around 9am and sometime after 6 pm.

This serves as the 24 hour advanced notice.

Thanks,

Lee
